

“Here at The Whitebrook we believe that flavours and produce out way the formalities of traditional restaurant service, we aim to ensure all guests have a relaxing and memorable dining experience.”

Chris Harrod – Chef/Patron

Following Chris’s vision for the restaurant we have created a wine list championing local Welsh and English wines, independent growers, organic, biodynamic and natural producers and lesser-known grape varieties.

Organic wine is organic in the sense of having been produced made from organically grown grapes, but may be subject to chemical and physical manipulation in the winemaking process.

In this day and age everyone understands what is meant by organic, but biodynamic viticulture takes things a few steps further. Vineyard practices are governed by lunar cycles, the grower believes the vineyard has a soul that needs nourishing.

The approach is centred on the enrichment of the soil through natural organic matter, the aim being to increase the availability of the elements needed by the vine such as nitrogen and water, which should logically improve vine health and quality of fruit.

The winemaker forgoes the use of laboratory prepared yeasts in favour of ones that occur naturally in the vineyard, the wines often have no fining or filtration and an absolute minimal use (if any) of sulphur at any stage of the wine making process.

Natural wine is wine made with minimal chemical and technological intervention in growing grapes and making them into wine. The term is used to distinguish such wine from organic wine and biodynamic wine because of differences in cellar practices. All natural wines are, however, farmed organically at a minimum and many growers are biodynamic in the vineyard as well.

Strictly speaking, natural wines are wines that are produced without adding or removing anything during winemaking, although some growers add tiny quantities of sulphites at bottling.
